ASX Online re-development update

Earlier this year we let you know that ASX Online is changing (Notice 0792.15.07). In early 2016 we will be delivering a new website underpinned by new technology, design and an improved user experience.

The website will deliver an improved range of features and services enabling you to perform tasks with confidence, ease and speed.

These include:

- A new, intuitive homepage, tailored to your role
- An optimised search experience that provides streamlined access to notices, rules, procedures and other ASX published content
- A personalised subscription feed to track notices and communications, including ASX24 notices and market events such as non-settlement days
- A new digital channel to lodge and manage service queries with ASX
- An easy way to register for ASX events and seminars
- An efficient way to perform key regulatory functions e.g. Short Sale Reporting, Securities Lending Reporting
- Improved password functionality

In short, the new ASX Online will deliver a significantly improved user experience.

What do I need to do and by when?

We will continue to reach out to you over the next couple of months to let you know what these changes mean for you. We will be asking you to perform some specific tasks such as confirming your account and reviewing your preferences.

To assist in the transition to the new site a readiness checklist will be sent to you in December to ensure you are set up and ready to go before the website is live in early 2016.
